Weekly Individual Status Report

This week I researched more into our final project ideas. We already have two main ones, but we as a group were still a little undecided. I then met up with the group and we talked about what we wanted to actually do for a project. I voted for the idea to create an app that uses your location to send reminders to your phone when you are near a location that you selected. I started looking into what was I would need to know in order to build an app for a phone since that is what our project will be ran on.
